Lawn Planting Should Include Careful Steps

"Spring is spring, the grass is green," says that familiar quip, but wait a minute! Is the grass green? In fact, do you have a properly planted and attended lawn growing? If not, there are no more perfect days for lawn planting than in the early spring.

Lawn planting encompasses several steps, whether you plant grass seed or seed of the many other ground covers. First, know your soil's characteristics and prepare it to hold lawn seeds by working in recommended conditions. Second, settle the lawn area, break up lumps, fill in hollows and install a sprinkler system if you desire. Make the lawn bed smooth and water to bring up any stray weeds and to settle soft spots, then smooth again using a roller (you can borrow a roller and fertilizer and a seed spreader from your nurseryman).

Fertilize and then spread the seed uniformly by hand or with a spreader raking in the seed and mulching it with peat moss or screened sawdust.

Water regularly to keep the mud dark with moisture until all the seeds have germinated and are up through the soil. Do not mow your newly planted lawn until it is at least two inches high.

As the summer months progress and your lawn continues to grow, be sure to continue a regular watering and feeding program, says the California Assn. of Nurserymen.
